ALAMEDA BOUND

FOR THE COAST

The Oceanic steamship Alameda sailed for San Francisco this morning at about 9:15 o'clock. The band attended and a large number of people gathered on the Hackfeld wharf to see their departing friends off. Owing to the absence of the usual strict quarantine regulations the departure of the steamer was quite prompt.

Among the departing passengers was Major Birkheimer, a member of the army board which arrived here a short time ago to decide upon suitable sites for fortifications on this island. He was accompanied by Mrs. Birkheimer.

Captain Jean Rault, master of the French bark Connatoble de Richmond, which went ashore on French Frigate Shoal, got out for his home in La Belle France. Hereafter, the affairs of the French vessel, if anything further develops, will be left in the hands of Acting French Consul Albert Raas. Paymaster's Clerk P. F. McWike, who was on duty at the local naval station under Paymaster Hall and the late Paymaster Rhodes, departed for Washington. He will remain in Washington awaiting orders. Mr. McWike is accompanied by Mrs. McWike and two children.

Alexander Young departed for San Francisco, where Mrs. Young is very ill.

Among the other well known local people were Hon. W. G. Irwin, Dr. M. Grossman, E. B. McClanahan and wife, Dr. Thornbury, the Misses Bieher and several others.

DEATH OF COL. CORNWELL

lowed remained loyal to his loyal patron. Upon the death of Kalakaua, Mr. Cornwell was reappointed by Queen Liliuokalani to her staff, when it was formed. He later on became its Colonel. In 1890 he was elected a noble in the Legislature for the four years' term. He was by no means partial to politics and accepted the position only on the urgent importunities of his many friends.

Mr. Cornwell's tastes ran strongly towards horsemanship. He was a thorough horseman, and an excellent judge and an ardent lover of horses. He took a great interest in racing events and was wont to have a well-stocked stable in Honolulu during the season. In his stables at Waikapu could always be seen the finest specimens of horse flesh to be found on the islands.

W. H. Cornwell married, in 1870, Miss Macfarlane, a sister of Col. Geo. W. Macfarlane. He leaves a family of three children—two daughters and a son—the latter a young man now on Maui. Mr. Cornwell was a member of the Privy Council of State, and was among the first to be appointed to that position by Her Majesty Queen Liliuokalani. He was also a Knight Commander of the Order of Kalakaua, a Knight Commander in the Order of Kapiolani, and wore the same decoration in the Order of Star of Oceania.

Mr. Cornwell was by nature a man of free, liberal, and generous proclivities. Hospitable and kindly, he was a lover of the good things of life, and was willing that others should be happy in the same privilege. He was universally popular, and had an extensive circle of friends.

Not very long since, deceased married a Mrs. Colvin and together they took a trip abroad. Mrs. Cornwell was with her husband on Maui at the time of his death.

Mr. Cornwell was for many years a sufferer from heart disease and although appearing very well when seen about among his friends, he nevertheless suffered intense agony at times.

In addition to the bereaved widow and his son on Maui there survive him his two daughters—Mrs. John S. Walker and Mrs. A. A. Graymer—both of this city. He also leaves two sisters, Mrs. Widdifield and Mrs. Vida, both

CASTLE HAD VERY ROUGH EXPERIENCE

The American barkentine S. N. Castle arrived from San Francisco this morning after a very stormy passage. Her master, Captain Nilson, who has been sailing between San Francisco and this port for the past twenty years, stated this morning that this last trip was the roughest he had ever experienced.

The S. N. Castle left San Francisco seventeen days ago. During the first week she had westerly winds with a very heavy swell. In seven days she made only 395 miles. After that she struck a very strong fair wind but had much trouble with an enormous northerly swell. This was evidently the aftermath of the heavy storms which have been raging up North and have caused such disaster to the shipping there.

The Castle rolled heavily in the trough of the sea but luckily escaped damage. Captain Nilson says the weather was just the kind to be found at Capt. Horn. In the meantime the strong wind sent the Castle along at a fast clip. She made no less than 247 miles yesterday.

The Castle brings 885 tons of general merchandise. She is lying at Brewers wharf, where she will discharge.

PASSENGERS ARRIVED.

of whom are residents of Honolulu. Another sister—Mrs. Friel—was burned to death in the mysterious fire that took place at the Friel home over a year ago.

The body of the late Col. W. H. Cornwell will be brought up from Maui in the Mauna Loa on Friday, accompanied by the widow and son. The exact date of the funeral has not been fixed. Sunday will probably be chosen. The deceased being a member of Hawaiian Lodge, No. 21, the services will be Masonic, the funeral to take place from the Masonic Temple, corner of Hotel and Alakea streets.
